

Latest Fads and Fashions

By FLORENCE FAIRBANKS

NEW YORK, July 30.—Correspondents who have made the rounds of the most fashionable seaside resorts of France write in terms of enthusiasm about the charming costumes which they had the opportunity to see. They say that the display of handsome lingerie costumes is unusually bewitching this season. Many of the handsome frocks show more or less broderie anglaise, Madeira work and cutout linen. The material may be white or colored, sheerest linen or heavy linen, but the openwork embroidery is there and is unquestionably effective.

A bodice and overskirt or tunic of broderie anglaise over a skirt of plain stuff or of lace are often seen and some of these are not so expensive as models apparently more simple. This is because all over embroidery or deep flouncing is often used, and though in fine quality such embroidery is expensive enough, it is by no means so expensive as embroidery done to order on the frock material.

Excellent effects are obtained by using the ready bands of English eyelet, which come in all widths and qualities and may be set in between groups of tucks or bands of lace. There are eyelet motifs of all kinds to which may readily be shaped into yokes, oversleeves, etc., and now these embroideries are marked down to tempting prices. Such embroidery in color on white or in white on color is tremendously effective upon linen, chambray, etc. Lovely robe patterns in the crepe embroidery are being sold at prices far below those asked at the beginning of the season and are often so clearly designed that even an inspired seamstress can put them together.

Scarfs are greatly in vogue and occupy an important position in the summer outfit of fashionable women. Chiffon lends itself to an easy adaptation, combining a sufficient body with suppleness, and offering a wide field of color from which to choose. Mouseline de soie, tulle, net and satin are materials from which summer scarfs are fashioned with the best success, while anything that will give color or decoration to them is sanctioned.

These scarfs may be edged in various ways. There can be a deep border of embroidery and beads, either transparent or wooden. From this deep hem a thin line of decoration should trail up each side for a foot or two, then the graceful and highly favored fringe can be used in any width, notched or straight, it gives a finish to a scarf that is delightfully easy and very effective.

One of the striking features of the summer coat is its lining. Of soft fustian in some of the most attractive designs, it generally contributes to a striking whole. White serge is still in high favor; oyster gray and tan linen are delightfully heavy in the new basket weaves, while woolen materials are loose enough to afford comfort without too much warmth. The summer coat is ornamented with a marine collar or with long revers that cross and button quite far down. Metal and tortoise-shell buttons are used on the summer coat and huge pockets are not lacking.

Enchantress is the new material of the moment, and the latest addition to the long list of decorative fabrics launched during the last three or four years. It is as pliable as muslin, yet as firm as chiffon velvet.

Sashes, tied in the mode of childhood, with bows and long ends, are seen on many white dresses in Paris this summer giving a dainty touch of color—coral, violet, dark blue, mauve, brown and black predominating. With the white dresses little coats in colored satin harmonizing with the shade of the sash, are universally worn. The back is made without a seam. Wide revers that either fall loosely or can be buttoned trim the front, and the coat cuts at hip length. All this indicates a departure from the one-color costume. Moreover, the dark coat with the white dress somehow makes a better looking, more dashing costume for the street.

At the Chantilly races recently it was very noticeable that the extremely tight skirt at bottom is going out. Most of the costumes were in exquisite good taste. There was a marked absence of the sensational. Perhaps the absurd shifts to which women who adopted the narrow width skirts have been put in case of bad weather in entering and leaving their carriages, have brought the fashionables back to their senses. The Parisienne loves to be chic, but being ridiculous is far from her desire. That does not mean that wide skirts are back, but skirts are decidedly wider and more graceful than they have been for the last six months.

Afternoon gowns of liberty satin or satin foulard continue to present a combination of plain and spotted material. Very short sleeves are worn, so short that they reach only a few inches below the shoulder. This, of course, means that very long silk gloves are again in vogue.

The lingerie hat is now made of straw, the lingerie effect being accomplished with the trimmings. All-over eyelet embroidery and fine sheer white patterns are pleated into dainty frills that hang over the brim, and wide pieces of the soft, fine embroidery are twisted and folded around the crown with a big chou or rosette at one side. All ruffles this summer are pleated, and sometimes flowered daintily is used in stead of white embroidery with pretty effect.

The jungle handles for parasols, for which ex-President Roosevelt's African trip is probably responsible, are all the rage just now. Provided the parasols have some of these fierce animal's heads or gentle birds carved upon their handles, it matters not what the cover is made of.

Little wooden carvings, which in some cases show some crude coloring, represent the heads of lions, tigers, hippopotamuses, elephants and other denizens of the jungle or the entire figures of parrots and other tropical birds.

Now, that all the summer blouses are cut low, the Dutch collar is again in vogue, but mounted on a neckband so as to avoid the unpleasant exposure of the whole neck, so frequent last summer. No jabot is worn with these collars, but they are fastened by means of a large cameo or some other pin in the same quaint fashion.

Very handsome buttons are in demand by high class garment manufacturers, especially outside coat makers. The variety embraces lines made of metal, imitation gems, cut steel, crocheted and combinations that are really works of art.

Pendant earrings are here in full force. Disks of sapphires or amethysts, surrounded by pearls or diamonds, are set swinging and are extremely becoming, but those made of jet or turquoise or pink coral or baroque pearls, with a little gold, find a ready acceptance.

Hair bizzarrie in shape are made more so by the rakish pose they are made to assume tilted over one eye. It would seem to the exclusion of sight, they convey an impression the reverse of gentility though they may be considered chic.

Exquisite are many of the Dresden flower-striped muslins. Some of the blouses of this material are trimmed with frills of sheer white muslin, bordered by tiny colored blinds.

While much neckwear is shown which includes Valenciennes and fine Cluny, it is noticeable that in high-class lines Irish and other crocheted effect laces are almost exclusively employed.

HOMESTEAD ENTRY RECALLS HISTORY OF "BILLY" STILES

When Mrs. William L. Stiles appeared early this week before United States Commissioner J. D. Taylor and completed the formalities of proving up on her homestead entry a few Bisbee people recognized in her the wife of "Billy" Stiles train robber had man and jail breaker whose name was one to conjure with in the lawless circles of the west. This was she however and connected with the homestead entry is an exceedingly interesting bit of Arizona history.

The land was first filed on by Stiles July 22, 1903 and was filed in the land office by means of a race which will be described further down in the article, over three claimants. The ground contains what is known as "U. A. Packard's little blue house" and lies inside of the fences of what was known as the "Original Greene grant" on both sides of the San Pedro river near Hereford.

Mrs. Stiles and her husband lived on the land just six days in a tent before the husband was arrested upon the charge of robbing the United States mails. His arrest occurred on August 21, 1903. A few months later he broke jail at Tombstone with Bert Alvord and neither was recaptured. Stiles was reported about a year ago to have been killed in Nevada under the name of William L. Stiles, those having been the first two sections of his engagement. Alvord was also reported to have been killed recently in South America.

Since she has resided on the land continuously Mrs. Stiles has had to defend her title to the ground on numerous occasions. Chief among the contestants has been a Mexican Ramon Tallas. He settled the ground prior to the coming of Stiles but owing to his ignorance of the date for filing suffered loss of his claim. He has lost his act to oust Mrs. Stiles both before the land commissioner's office at Phoenix and the department of the interior at Washington. He is now striving to have his case reopened.

The account of how Stiles succeeded in securing his filing first reads like western fiction of the ten cent magazine type. The matter below was taken however from a transcript of the record of Frank H. Hereford vs. William L. Stiles. The following is the extract.

The lands in controversy are claimed by said Hereford to be within the limits of what was formerly known as the San Pedro grant, a private land claim long since rejected, lying on both sides of, and extending along the boundary of the south to the Mexican San Rafael Del Valle private grant on the north; and at least a part of each of the tracts involved in this controversy is within the enclosure of the Greene Cattle Company which has for many years occupied and kept enclosed a large area of land in that vicinity now known to be public land, the company claiming to have purchased the same in good faith from various parties holding under the San Pedro grant. This company, Col. William C. Greene, its president and principal stockholder, is the party with whom Hereford was connected in the occupancy of said lands, and in whose interest all of said soldier's

COLORADO RIVER PROBLEM.
PHOENIX July 30.—Consulting Engineer L. C. Hill will go to Yuma Sunday to join Engineer J. A. Okerson who is now on his way west to inspect the Colorado river and devise a plan to control that stream with $1,000,000 appropriated by the last congress. Okerson will spend some time on the river studying the break, which has turned the water into Mexico and left the former bed some distance below Yuma high and dry. Another problem is the back cutting the stream is doing. This threatens to take out the Southern Pacific bridge at Yuma and the Laguna Dam. Okerson who is a member of the Mississippi river commission has been appointed by President Taft. Hill will give Okerson the benefit of the knowledge he has gained through the construction of the Laguna dam, and may take a trip with him down the river to study conditions.
